

COMMISSIONING ART BY JEANETTE KUVIN OREN

Commissioning art is an exciting and interactive process. Jeanette works with you to create unique, lasting, uplifting and beautiful Judaic art for your home, synagogue or organization. Here is a brief outline of how the commission process works. Please feel free to contact Jeanette regarding any questions you may have about commissioning art.

1. The synagogue, client, or organization hires Jeanette Kuvin Oren based on her previous body of work. If a synagogue or client wants to interview Jeanette before commissioning her, a fee will be charged if they do not follow through with the commission.
2. Jeanette and the client agree on prices for the items being commissioned and a contract is signed. A one-third deposit is paid to Jeanette.
3. If necessary, a site visit* can be arranged. Jeanette comes to the synagogue, home, or office. Site visits are not always necessary.
4. The synagogue or client provides photographs and/or color swatches, or any other samples of the interior of the sanctuary (if Jeanette hasn't visited and taken photos). The committee/synagogue lets Jeanette know what ideas and themes they would like to see in the finished items.
5. Jeanette provides color paintings of the items being commissioned, and swatches of fabrics, glass or mosaic materials as needed. They are submitted for approval to the committee/synagogue. Jeanette will change the design until the committee approves of the design.
6. Once the designs are approved, Jeanette begins making the items. Half-way through the project the second-third is paid to the artist.
7. The finished items are delivered to the synagogue/client and the remaining third of the balance is paid to the artist.

* Site visits are not included in this price. The fee for a visit is airfare and/or transportation costs plus daily expenses.

- Installation costs for stained-glass and mosaics are included in the price.
- Shipping is not included in the price.
